International Leadership Institute
Providing Leadership Development Services and Programs in the US and Europe since 1985

ILI in the 21st Century

From its beginnings in 1984, the International Leadership Institute has had one major goal: to assist business and professional leaders in building the knowledge, skills and attitudes needed for success in a highly-competitive global economy.

In 1989, as communism collapsed across Central and Eastern Europe, the of making the transition from an inefficient and cumbersome command economy to a market-responsive and market-oriented economy.

As we consider the enormous strides these countries have made in this transition, we feel blessed and privileged to be part of such an historical epoch of change and growth.

Recent participants in the US AID/World Learning program, Custodial Banking—Bulgaria, delivered by the Institute, enjoy a boat ride on the St. John's River in Jacksonville.

USAID

Our relationship with the United States Department of State Agency for International Development (US AID) has been one of the most satisfying and useful working relationships we have established to date.

The aims and goals of the US AID programs, administered by Washington DC-based World Learning, are in close alignment with our own goals.

These programs aim to help participants “acquire the skills to initiate and support change for the positive advancement of their country.

Training programs provide the means for linkages between individuals and institutions to develop lasting professional relationships,” a goal which harmonizes with the Institute’s objective to

For the new millennium, and especially in light of the events of September 2001 in New York and Washington that showed the devastation possible among nations with sharply differing values and ethics, the Institute will continue working with business and professional leaders from Central and Eastern Europe, helping them see the relationships between America's Judeo-Christian values and our economic prosperity along with our ability to endure disaster.

We strongly believe that capitalism must be woven into a framework of decent behavior based on mutual respect and cooperation in order to succeed, and we endeavor to demonstrate this belief through our executive education programs. This is our continuing agenda into the twenty-first century.
